授業題目	Contemporary Chinese politics and Society I
授業の目的と概要	This class aims to provide students with a basic understanding of contemporary Chinese society and politics. Since the 1980s, China has experienced rapid economic growth thanks to its reintegration into the global market and its shift away from a socialist economic system. While China has liberalized its economic system, its political system has largely remained unchanged. Demands for greater political participation from various sectors of society were often met with the state's fierce opposition, sometimes resulting in violent crackdowns. What do these violent encounters between the state and society tell us about the characteristics of China's society and politics? The course will begin by exploring the historical relationship between the modern nation-state and society in general, followed by an in-depth examination of newly published research focusing specifically on contemporary China.
学修の到達目標	By the end of this class, students will have: (1) gained a basic understanding of the relationship between violence and the modern nation-state, (2) acquired specific knowledge about China's political and societal dynamics, (3) developed critical perspectives on state-society relations in contemporary China.
